Mid-air servo!

The US Marines don't stop for anything, and that includes running out of fuel when they're on a mission

For just $45m, you too could buy a KC-130 Hercules — seen here pumping fuel at 1135 litres per minute to USMC Super Stallion helicopters over the Gulf of Aden in the Middle East. The Hercules has a tactical tanker and transport role, but if it could also sling soft drinks, ZOO mags and meat pies to those pilots, it'd be an airborne petrol station.

Mother hippopotamus watches on helplessly as a vicious male treats her newborn calf like a rag doll

 The mum of the five-day-old hippo calf had chased away threats to her bub for hours — but one prick snuck through with fatal results. The sub-adult — the hippo equivalent of the teen on crystal meth keying your ride — seized the calf in its jaws, and then tossed it through the air when Mum retaliated. The drama unfolded recently in South Africa's iSimangaliso Wetland Park.

STUNNER ALEXANDRA LILLIAN,
FOR THAT MATTER

Os Alexandra Lillian, 22, the perfect woman? She's hotter than 10 Miss Universe winners put together, and she likes drinking beer. So if she's not the world's most flawless female, we have no idea who is...

G'day, Alexandra. As this is your first ZOO shoot, please tell us a bit about yourself...

I'm studying for a bachelor of applied science, majoring in veterinarian technology, which will allow me to work with bio security or in a vet clinic.

Bio security?

Please explain.

Yep, working with Customs in animal quarantine. The more I work with animals, the happier I'll be. I've got four cats and two dogs.

Now all you need is a partridge in a pear tree.

What do you get up to when you're not studying?

I like to go to the beach, go camping, do a bit of four-wheel driving, and pole fitness.

That's the one that's like pole dancing, but you don't do it in a room full of drunk men, right?

[Laughs] Yes. My mum wouldn't allow me to do that! I thought it looked easy at first but it's a lot of strength work. You get a lot of bruises but you get used to it.

Now, moving on to the important stuff: what's your stance on beer?

I like drinking XXXX Gold.

How often?

[Laughs] Not as often as I'd like to! About once a month I drink socially, so I'm not a huge drinker. But when I do it, I do it right.

And exactly how does one do it right?

Definitely not by yourself. I prefer having a barbie with some mates and getting drunk on the patio. It's cheaper and you can do it in your pyjamas.

Have you ever tried the pole fitness after a few XXXX Golds?

I did, but I fell off, hurt my back and had to go to a chiropractor! It didn't help that there were people in the background egging me on.

You said you don't get on it as often as you'd like. If you could drink whenever you wanted, with no bad side effects, how often would you have a crack?

Once a weekend. You don't want to do it every night or you start to look like an alcoholic.

“I DON'T MIND A BIT OF A BEER GUT ON A GUY”

Yep, that's what our doctor's always telling us. What about blokes who love a beer? Are you cool with them?

Yeah, I have nothing against it, but if they're drinking to the point where they're always drunk, I'm not into that.

Fairy nuff. What about guys who aren't permanently off chops, but enjoy a lager often enough to give them a bit of a beer gut? Not a Clive Palmer-sized gut, obviously, but something visible?

I don't mind a bit of a beer gut. You just made millions of

“WHO DOESN'T LOVE POURING BEER OVER THEMSELVES?”

Aussie men very happy, Alexandra. We've shot you pouring two jugs of beer all over yourself. Have you ever done that before?

I have, actually. I always seem to get the messy photo shoots. I've been covered in Twinkies, cream... every time I come home I smell like a different product, but it was pretty fun. I'd do it again — who doesn't love pouring beer over themselves?

Hear, hear. So does that mean you smelled like a booze hound when you finished your ZOO shoot?

I had a shower, but I still had the scent on me. I had to catch a plane home that night and the person who sat next to me was giving me the weirdest look. He thought I was an alcoholic, and I didn't order a drink on the flight because I didn't want to make it worse!

We were actually thinking of saving the beer you poured over yourself and holding a competition so a reader could win it.

[Laughs] I think that's quite hilarious!

Sweet. Now we know what to get you to do for your next shoot...

But extreme athletes keep leaping after parachute disaster at 150 metres

F Yank BASE jumpers Austin Carey and Jay Rawe spent almost a year in intensive recovery after breaking their backs in a near-fatal fall. But while normal people wouldn't so much as jump off a kerb after that, the pair are back doing the sport that almost killed them.

Their parachutes tangled as they leaped off a bridge in Idaho and plummeted 150 metres onto the riverbank. Rawe smashed a vertebra and badly damaged two more, while Carey's back was broken so badly doctors thought he might not walk again.

Rawe lost his balance while standing on Carey's shoulders at the start of the jump. It all went downhill from there: "I grabbed his pilot chute," he explained, "then landed in his parachute ... I kicked my feet over my head, fell out, and remember spinning at the ground as it got closer and knowing we were gonna hit."

Despite a healing process that was "insanely" rough, the duo vowed to keep BASE jumping. Just a few weeks ago Carey went back and hurled himself off the exact same bridge where their troubles began. "It was such an amazing feeling to be back there after everything I had been through," he said. What a freak!

Wheelchair-bound champ makes drift car to help disabled dudes

 You know how chick-lit films leave your girl looking like she's been rubbing her eyes with raw onions? The story of disabled drifter Rob Parsons' inventive genius is the equivalent for blokes. Parsons landed stiff legged in a dirt-track bingle in June 2011, breaking both legs, puncturing his lungs and severing his spinal cord.

The Californian left hospital six months later, after a bacterial back infection, paralysed waist-down — but with the idea of building a unique car so he could continue drifting.

Over 18 months, he customised a 1991 Nissan 180SX chassis from the seat of his wheelchair. His biggest challenge was the electronic clutch system, which needed to work as quickly as someone kicking a pedal.

He got a chance to show off his 447kW motor in the first runout of his Chairslayers Foundation, which is on a mission to help disabled people try motor sport.

Ben Conolly, 17, contacted Parsons, and he and his folks were flown to the US by the Starlight Foundation. The Yank took the young kid through the clutch, then he supervised as Ben, who's paralysed due to a tumour, killed a set of tyres.

"It's been the best day of my life so far, for sure," Conolly said afterwards.

So there you have it: proof that being a hoon is actually good for humanity.

Jet-powered surfboard!

Paddling out just became 1000 per cent easier thanks to 57kmh wave-breaker

After eight years of development, the JetSurf — a Kevlar/carbon-fibre surfboard with a two-stroke 100cc engine designed by a former Formula 1 engineer — has hit the market for $17,000. Needing a tow into the world's biggest waves could become a thing of the past.

"You'll be able to ride big waves a lot more often than just the perfect days... we're gonna be able to ride unrideable stuff," said

Hawaiian big-wave specialist Kai Lenny, after trialling the board on his famous home break Pe'ahi, also known as Jaws, in a clip posted online.

Of course, being able to ride unrideable stuff might lead some surfers to bite off more than they can chew, but since when have crazy risks bothered extreme sportsmen?

The 180cm board is controlled by an electronic leash attached to the rider's wrist, which acts as a throttle and emergency kill cord. The company's released three models — the Factory, UltraSport and the most powerful, the ProRace, with top speeds of between 48 and 57kmh.

With a full tank and battery, the rider could travel 75km without stopping, though returning that distance to shore's a big ask. There's always skirting the coast, of course — and the 15kg board's light enough to tuck under your arm if you're catching the bus home...

Head transplants we'd like to see

A crazy doctor is preparing to put a sick man's head on a healthy body. And that gave us a few weird ideas...

Earlier this month Italian surgeon Dr Sergio Canavero announced that he plans to become the first man to transplant a human head onto a donor body. The owner of the head, Valery Spiridonov (pictured), is suffering from a fatal muscle-wasting disease and is prepared to undergo the controversial procedure, even though it's 99.999999 per cent sure to kill him.

However, if it proves a success, Dr Canavero will have blazed a trail other medicos can follow. ZOO, with the help of two slabs and a bottle of Jack, came up with the following head transplant suggestions...

STEPHEN HAWKING & VLADIMIR KLITSCHKO

For decades the man with the planet's best brain has been laughed at due to his disability. But when we put his head on the body of the undisputed world heavyweight champ, the laughter will stop, or people will start losing teeth. He'd be the toughest and smartest man on Earth, and will probably run the whole joint within a week.

RAY MEAGHER & CHRIS HEMSWORTH

Many Aussie soap stars have cracked it big in Hollywood and the only thing holding Alf Stewart back is the fact his body looks like a beanbag full of lard. But if he had Thor's massive biceps and one per cent body fat, he'd be in a Marvel movie franchise quicker than old mate Alf can say, "Flamin' kids!"

DUSTIN FLETCHER & TOM HAWKINS

The Bombers legend is set to become just the third player to break the 400-game mark. But his 39-year-old body has had more wear and tear than Clive Palmer's favourite chair, so an upgrade to Hawkins' towering frame will make him the first man to pass 600 matches in the AFL.

VERNE TROYER & ANDRE THE GIANT

Yes, Andre's been dead for 22 years, but that's not the biggest obstacle here: it's trying to fit Verne's tiny head onto the Giant's neck, which is almost as thick as our editor's skull. Mini-Me still wouldn't be able to drive a car, not 'cos he can't reach the pedals, but 'cos he can't fit into the thing.

JULIE BISHOP & DARTH VADER

Like Darth, our Foreign Minister can kill a man without touching him. But instead of using a Force choke, she uses the patented Bishop Death Stare. ZOO's pretty certain that if she had the Sith Lord's robotic body, she'd have got Andrew Chan and Myuran Sukumaran off the death penalty.

PETER DINKLAGE & YAO MING

The Game of Thrones star has proven himself to be an amazing actor, but his height restricts the number of roles he can play. But if we give him the ex-NBA star's 229cm frame, he could go on to win a Best Actor Oscar for nailing the lead role in Massive Ranga: the Luc Longley Story.

It's a royal flush!

Sphincter is coming!

Game of Thrones fanatics create working Iron Throne crapper

It's easy to sit the Iron Throne at the Complex Bar in Los Angeles — simply drink your body weight in beer and visit their custom-made dunny!

The contraption was assembled by Tim Baker Creations for Complex co-owner John Giovanazzi, as part of the YouTube Super-Fan Builds series.

Baker's team measured the space, and then cut a plywood back plate with spiky "blades".

"When people are drinking you probably don't want a toilet with a lot of sharp spikes," said Baker.

Then came the sword hilts (cast in plastic) and more blades made from flexible neoprene rubber, a base coat of black matte primer and dry brushing of different elements to show layering.

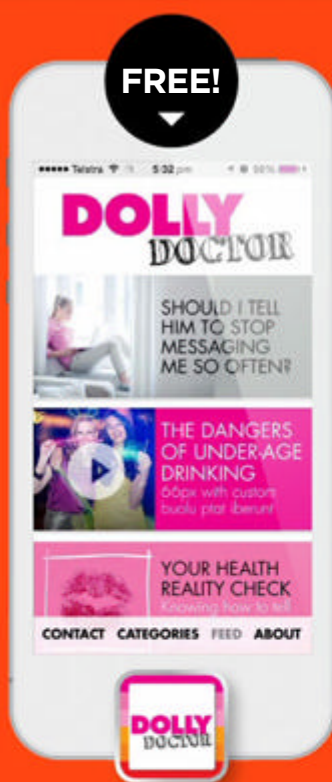

The whole bizzo's been coated in layers of marine resin, which may protect against ocean water, but can they protect against a barrage of piss? Talk about "that unclean iron chair".

HBO sells its own fireproof fibreglass throne replica for $36k, but you can't crap in it.

666: the number of the beast

McLaren's 675LT supercar makes 666 brake horsepower. And yes, Satan is on the waiting list for one...

Take a 650S, swap out enough parts to leave it 100kg lighter and this is what's left: a long-tail supercar that can smash 330kmh at full throttle. The 3.8L twin V8 will hit 100 kays in 2.9sec, and 200 in 7.9sec — quick enough to outrun a battalion of angels what friends are for

Pissed bloke's best mate gives him a back job to remember

Pommy pisshead Josh Darnbrough was tatts-blotto when these words were inked into his back.

The 24-year-old was first to pass out at a New Year's Eve party — giving his best mate Rob Gaskell the chance for revenge.

A few years earlier Josh had stuffed up while attempting to give Rob a lizard tatt, which he then failed to turn into a cross, then failed to turn into hands and a gun. "He did an abomination of a job and every time he tried to touch it up it got worse," Rob said.

So instead of grabbing a texta and drawing pictures of dicks on his face, Gaskell grabbed a DIY tattoo kit and started writing away.

Darnbrough found out the next day. "I thought, 'I didn't go to bed with a tattoo,'" he said. "I didn't know when I'd got it and no-one would tell me who had done it."

What was he drinking — a cocktail of metho, roofies and ketamine? We'll have a pint of that, barman.

The mates from Ashton, in north-west England, treated it as a practical joke and are both having their skin slip-ups professionally removed.

ZOO's stand-up comedian heckles life every week

KARATE KID IN THE COIN LAUNDRY

Had a run-in the other day with some fk-knuckle in the communal coin laundry of the building I'm staying in. My wash was done so I took this guy's clothes out of the dryer and stacked them on top of another washing machine. His stuff is dry and the cycle has finished, so it's fair game to put my junk in. But as I'm doing it, this washed-up cocksnap of a bloke walks in and goes, "Did you touch my clothes?" and I lay down a straight-up "Yep!" You shoulda seen this wad of smegma. There's two types of people in this world: those who saw Karate Kid and wanted to be like Daniel LaRusso, and those who wanted to open a dojo for shitheads so they can be closer to teenage boys — he was definitely in the latter.

But what this dude from Cobra-Douche dojo doesn't realise is I'm three weeks into the biggest comedy festival in the world and sharper than Mr Miyagi after a blue-light disco. "What makes you think you can touch my shit?" he asks. I go, "Basic cognition, logic and base-level motor skills." My big words have him on the ropes early. I continue, "You pay for the period of the cycle.

Once the cycle is finished, your shit's comin' out."

"Ever heard of waiting?" he asks. I reply, "Listen, mate," and he pulls the classic, "I'm not your mate". I reply, "You're right. If I was your mate, I'd know how long it takes you to jack off to your high-school yearbook, but seeing as we're not mates, I made an executive decision and stacked your dry clothes over there."

An Asian woman walks into the laundry and touches him on the hip. It's obviously his missus. I point at him as I ask her, "Is this your child?" English obviously isn't either of their strong points and he's gone quiet with rage. It's 11am on a Sunday so obviously I'm three Bloody Marys in and calmer than Valium. He goes, "Don't ever touch my stuff ever again."

I put my coins into the dryer and turn it on and leave him with a finishing point:

"Obviously I'm new to this laundry thing — your mum usually does it for me — but if you don't want anyone touching your clothes, wait down here with your cock-pump catalogues until the cycle has finished." I wait three seconds, he has no comeback, so I yell, "Sweep the leg, Johnny!" and walk out. Ctz... ctz everywhere.

25 amazing facts about the cause of and solution to all of life's problems

HOUSE MADE OF 300,000 COASTERS

Beer coasters: they're not just good for preserving tables and being ripped up and flicked at your mates. Sven Goebel of Germany used 300,000 of them to make a house in 2010. He worked up to eight hours a day on it and even furnished it with armchairs, a table and a fireplace. Then he knocked it all down because he's a bit of a perverse bastard.

STEIN-SLINGING RECORD SET IN OZ!

Carrying massive mugs of beer was practically invented by the Germans, so they would've been in shock when Aussie citizen Reinhard Wurz set the world record by lugging an amazing 50kg of lager for 40 metres in Sydney in 2007. He manhandled 20 steins, easily beating the previous record of 16. However, a German took the mark back by carrying 27 last year.

THE PYRAMIDS WERE BUILT ON BREWSKIS

Building Egypt's Great Pyramids was a prick of a job, but at least workers were given a brew three times a day, mainly because the water in the Nile was no good for drinking and beer was free of bacteria. The ancient Egyptians thought drunkenness was a holy state, too.

Three cans are better than two!

LONDON'S GREAT BEER FLOOD KILLED EIGHT PEOPLE

If you thought running out of Veebs before the end of the grand final was a beer-based tragedy, think again. On October 17, 1814, a vat broke at the Horse Shoe Brewery in London, sending a 15-foot-high tidal wave of piss through the area. Eight people were killed and roughly 610,000 litres of beer were lost, although some people took advantage and got a free drink.

OZ BUSTS BARMAID FOR CRUSHING CANS WITH HER CANS

In 2007 Luana De Faveri (pictured, left) was fined $1000 for crushing beer cans with her magnificent boobs as she worked as a skimpy barmaid in Pinjarra, just south of Perth. Apparently she was in breach of the Liquor Control Act, or as she said, "The police told me I was attracting too much attention to my sexuality."

ZOO

WIKI-BEER-DIA!

YES, THAT'S A BONG BEER TAP HANDLE

When the Redhook-Hilliard brewery launched their hemp-infused Joint Effort beer in 2013, they came up with possibly the greatest marketing gimmick in lager history: a beer tap handle that's a dead ringer for a huge yellow bong. ZOO couldn't find out how many were swiped by weedheads, but we'll hazard a guess and say all of them.

OUTGREW HIS FIRST HOUSE!

6788 CANS OF BEER ON THE WALL...

Back in 1975, Pommy banker Nick West's wife bought him a book on beer cans. It was the stupidest thing she ever did... besides marrying Nick. He has now filled their home with 6788 British beer cans, and even paid $2371 for one of the aluminium tubes. The couple even had to move to a bigger house to fit them all in. How Deb hasn't filed for divorce is beyond us.

THE YANK WHO BEAT BOONIE'S RECORD

Wade Boggs is a former pro baseballer who was so good he made it into the Hall of Fame. If they had a hall for sinking beer, he'd be in that, too. According to It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia actor Charlie Day, Boggs admitted that he once smashed 107 cans in a day. He also chugged 64 cans on a cross-USA flight, beating Boonie's legendary mark by 12.

MEAT LAGER: MANKIND'S GREATEST INVENTION

The US-based Rogue brewery specialises in some pretty weird concoctions, the best of which is their Voodoo Doughnut Bacon Maple Ale. A quick geek at the list of ingredients shows they use apple-wood smoked bacon to make it. Bravo! Oh, and call us an ambulance... we've just had a case of it and now we've got a blocked artery to go with our hangover.

ALL CREATURES GREAT AND SMASHED!

Thanks to fermented fruit dropping from trees and being eaten by all manner of beasts, it's almost certain that animals got smashed on the turps before humans even walked the Earth. And now that they have access to some man-made grog, it's happening more and more often.

Take the monkey to the right, for example. He and his mates live on the Caribbean island of St Kitts, where they have learned to steal cocktails from tourists and get off chops.

And the 250kg gorilla in the photo (below, top right) punched that photographer just two months ago after he got hammered by eating bamboo stems that fermented in his stomach.

This pig has been barred from a London pub for stealing pints and even headbutting customers

Elephants have been known to get smashed by eating certain types of fruit in huge amounts

Swedish cops and fireys had to free this drunk moose from a tree back in September 2011

Last July this deer went to a liquor store in the US, knocked over some bottles and refused to show ID

119 BEERS IN SIX HOURS!

Late pro wrestler Andre the Giant was an Uluru made of flesh and bone: 224cm tall and 240kg. Judging by his ability to drink beer, about 140kg of that was his liver. The French monolith once downed 119 beers in a six-hour sesh. And at 355mL per beer, that's a bit more than 42 litres of piss, people — or enough to kill Keith Richards seven times over.

THE BARMAID WHO PULLED TWO MILLION BEERS

If the late Dolly Saville of Buckinghamshire, UK, had a dollar for every pint she pulled, she'd have been richer than Nathan Tinkler. Dolly spent 74 years as a barmaid until her death a couple of months ago, aged 100, and it's estimated she poured at least two million life-affirming pints of warm Pommy beer in that time. The woman should be sainted!

Anyone for beer Jenga?

NOW THAT'S WHAT WE CALL A PISSHEAD

John Evans's neck is roughly the same thickness and strength as an elephant's leg. That's one way to explain how the huge Pom balanced a spine-compacting 237 pints of beer atop his noggin. Another, more accurate way would be to reveal that his bone density is actually increasing as he ages, whereas everyone else's gets more and more shithouse.

BREW HELPS KEEP CHICKS BEAUTIFUL

Japanese beer maker Suntory has a brew containing collagen, which can repair damaged skin. The idea is to down a shitload of Precious™, which is five per cent alcohol, and not only will you think everyone's better-looking because you've got beer goggles on, but everyone will think you're better-looking because your crow's feet disappear.

WORLD'S FASTEST SUDS SKOLLER

June 22 should be marked on every pisshead's calendar. On that day in 1977 Yank dude Steven Petrosino (pictured) skoll'd a litre of beer in just 1.3 seconds — a 56 per cent improvement over the previous record of 2.3 seconds! How is this physically possible, you ask? Our best guess is the bloke's got a throat like a stormwater drain.

The earliest man-made grog existed at least as far back as 10,000BC, in the New Stone Age

There's a good chance that humans used beer as a staple source of nutrition before they used bread

A Chinese imperial order in about 1116BC declared that drinking alcohol was prescribed by Heaven

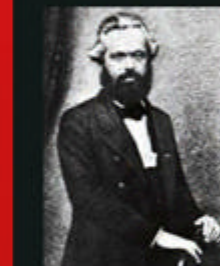

New research has found that Alexander the Great became an alcoholic due to the pressures of running his massive empire

George Washington loved his booze and for a time was the biggest maker of whisky in the USA

Distilled spirits were first made in the Middle Ages, and brandy was originally called the "water of life"

Karl Marx, the man behind communism, was a big drinker who was fond of riding donkeys while he was off his head

In the 16th Century people in Spain were necking an average of 100 litres of grog per year

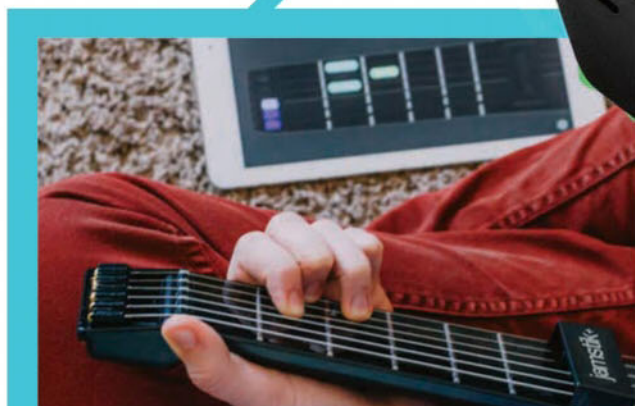

High-functioning pisshead Winston Churchill liked to down a whisky soda with his breakfast

Frederick the Great, king of Prussia, tried to ban coffee so everyone would drink alcohol instead. Top bloke!

Andrew Johnson, 17th President of the USA, was almost certainly still drunk when he was sworn in after Abe Lincoln's death

A year ago, only a small corner of the British county of Essex knew who Bethany Lily was. But inside six months, she's gone global... and it's not hard to see why. Once you've picked your jaw up off the floor and mopped up that drink you've just knocked over, join us as we introduce you to the hottest new chick on the block.

We understand you like to take your own sexy pictures. There are quite a few on your social media...

I studied photography and that sort of piqued my interest in modelling. I wanted to study photography at uni, but I wanted to do modelling first. I can always go back to photography later, right?

At least you'll learn on the job! Tell us something we can't see from your snaps.

I like motorbikes and I have a vintage Triumph Bonneville in the living room! My dad used to race them — he even won at Santa Pod racetrack in Bedfordshire. He's a real speed freak and he's got me obsessed with them, too.

[Laughs] No, but I always sit on it. I love it!

Where would we see you on a night out?

I go out in east London. I do like getting dressed up, but mainly I'm a jeans and trainers girl. I don't even wear make-up if I don't have to. I'd rather watch live bands in a dingy club than pout for snaps while holding a bottle of vodka!

Which bands do you like?

I like my older stuff — I'm into Blink-182 and Sum 41. I also love Jamie T.

What's your messiest recent night out?

I went to The Box in London. One of my friends is a performer there and all kinds of freaky stuff goes on. There was one lady on stage who was squeezing mustard out of a pair of fake boobs!

Where's the strangest place you've seen your rack?

I was in a newsagent on New Year's Day and was on the cover of one newspaper. I went to buy it and the guy behind the counter was staring at me. He said, "Oh, you should come and buy the paper more often!"

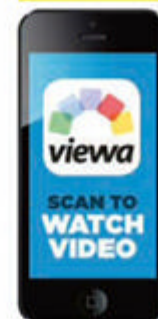

Are you enjoying having lots of fans on Twitter?

I do like to chat to my fans online — if they play nice! Otherwise, they get ignored. I'm not sure one of the guys who contacted me spoke very good English. He tweeted, "You are perfect breasts!"

[Laughs] I think he meant, "You have perfect breasts."

PLUS: TOP BOXERS PREDICT WHO WILL WIN

The Aussie who beat MANNY PACQUIAO

Local boxer Nedal “Skinny” Hussein once KO’d the world’s best — but got ripped off by the ref. Here’s his take on Pacquiao...

Not so long ago, Aussie boxer Nedal “Skinny” Hussein was one of the most feared fighters on the planet. He was aggressive, possessed an iron chin and was knocking down whomever they stood in front of him. So they put him up against world champion Manny Pacquiao... and he dropped him, too.

One of the dodgiest refereeing decisions against an Aussie ever saw Pacquiao given up to 18 seconds to compose himself after hitting the canvas — much longer than the 10 seconds boxing rules allow. Later in the round Skinny was dubiously deducted a point for using his elbow, and he’s still annoyed about it today. “I thought I won the fight there,” he says bitterly. “And I was never really the same after that.”

“I’ve got nothing against Manny, but the refereeing was terrible”

Did you know much about Pacman before the fight?

To be honest, I didn’t really rate him. He was a super bantamweight back then. He’d beaten a few blokes, but I thought I was better than the ones that he beat.

What’s Manny like to fight?

He’s very quick and sharp and very unpredictable. He’s in and out, he’s side to side. He’s not the most awkward fighter I’ve fought, but he’s definitely the trickiest. He was smart and cagey. I mean, after I hit him with that jab [that knocked him down] I hardly hit him with one after it.

What did you think of him out of the ring?

He’s a good bloke. He’s a champion. He’s good to his people and there’s a reason why everybody loves him.

What was going on up until you decked him? Were you feeling confident?

I knew he’d come out at a million miles an hour. He’d do that back in the day; he’d blow guys away in one or two rounds. And when he came out against me he tried to do the same thing. He had me in the corner and he was going berserk! And he ran into a couple of my left hooks and sort of settled down. After a minute he had more respect for me and he stopped being reckless and wild. The first couple of rounds were evenly matched. And then I knocked him down. What did you think once he hit the floor?

I thought the fight was over. That’s the honest truth. He got up, he was game. He didn’t want to lose. I’ve got nothing against Manny, but the refereeing was terrible. The long count had nothing to do with Manny.

Was the ref a crook?

One hundred per cent! He hasn’t reffed since. When we did contracts for the fight they told us we’d have an American ref. But they got this guy who was an American citizen, but he was from the Philippines.

In 2000 you were undefeated, and then you went to the Philippines...

It was a hostile crowd and it was a hostile place, but I was up for it. He was a world champ at the time and defending his international title. They made it very hard for us over there. They had us staying three hours away from where the fight was.

SKINNY'S TAKE ON FLOYD VS MANNY

→ What do you think will happen in the big fight?

I think Floyd will win. I wasn't impressed with Manny's recent fights. He dominated the fights, but those blokes wouldn't have been worthy enough to be a sparring partner of the Manny Pacquiao of old. I reckon he will win a few rounds against Floyd early. But Floyd will get on top and pick him apart after the sixth.

What does Pacman have to do to be in with a chance?

Boxers like Floyd hate being boxed. They like fighters bringing it to them and staying in their range where they can pick them apart. If Manny can make Floyd come forward then it's new ground for Floyd. Manny has got quicker hands and feet than Floyd. Cotto and Maidana have proven that Floyd has slowed down. Manny couldn't knock out [Brandon] Rios or that last bloke he fought, so I'm not sure he'll be able to knock out Floyd Mayweather.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Boxing legends predict Manny vs Floyd

Find out who the world's finest reckon will take out the fight of the century

LENNOX LEWIS

"Floyd is the best at side-stepping and movement. He's very quick and hard to hit. Pacquiao is a great guy when it comes to offense and trying to break a person down. He's trying to knock you out so it's a great match-up between styles. Mayweather Jr has all the advantages — that natural ability and rhythm. I think Floyd has so much talent, quickness and that natural ability to win. It really depends on his heart."

MIKE TYSON

"When you think about the two fighters and the people that gave Pacquiao the most difficult time in his career, [it was] only the people that threw over 100 punches a round — [Tim] Bradley, [Juan Manuel] Marquez. Floyd doesn't throw nowhere near 100 punches a round ... He's more of a scientific fighter, he really plots a lot and he sits around and he pulls it. [Pacquiao's] all over, trading, moving ... I just don't think he's going to be able to play that plodding skill, pop pop pop! [Pacquiao's] like perpetual motion. Floyd gotta fight the first couple of rounds. He's gonna lose the round if he's laid-back."

SERGIO MARTINEZ

"Floyd Mayweather can have Manny for breakfast, lunch or anything. Pacquiao is still a long way from being ready ... This was never too much of a fight to me because Mayweather is in a league of his own."

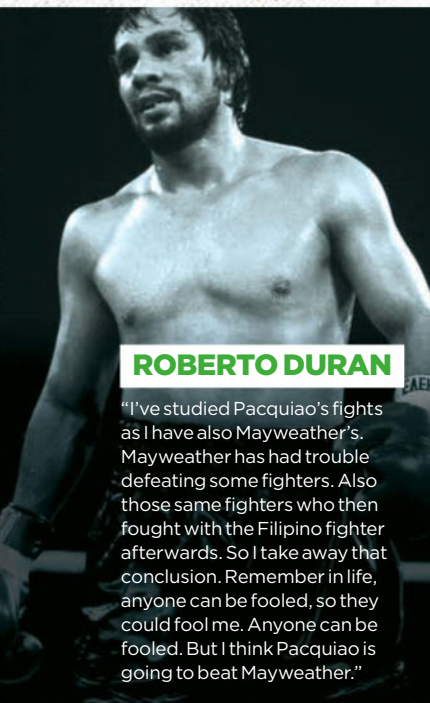

MARVIN HAGLER

"Whether Pacquiao loses in the first round, whether he knocks out Mayweather in the first round, it's still going to be the biggest fight in history. Mayweather, he's using his head, he's using his skills and strategy, and let's hope Pacquiao don't fall into his tricks."

OSCAR DE LA HOYA

"If [Pacquiao] has the legs for 12 rounds to move inside, outside, side to side and throw a lot of punches, then I really do feel that Pacquiao can do some damage to Mayweather. But then again, Mayweather is a masterful boxer. He is a master at defence so it is just going to be a really entertaining fight."

ROBERTO DURAN

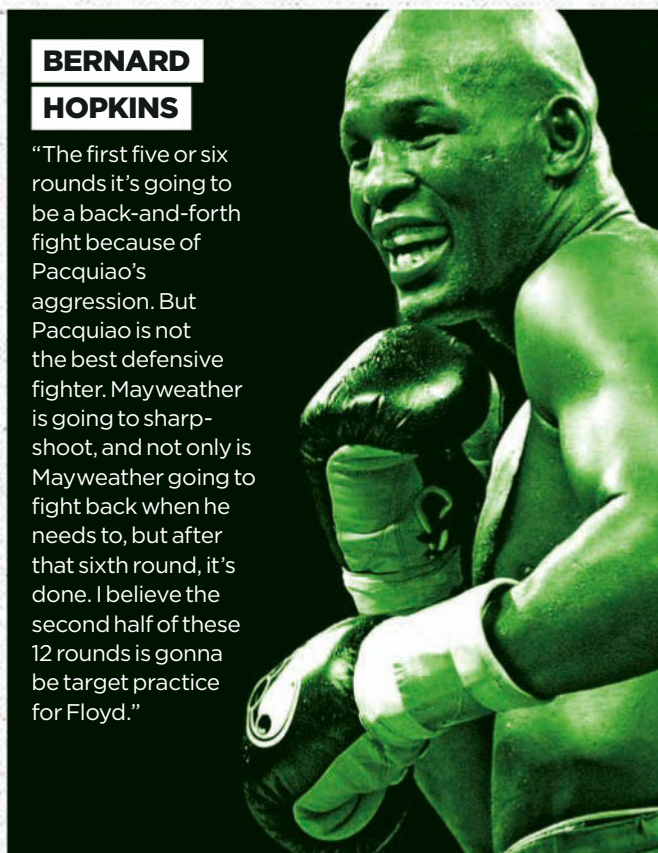

"I've studied Pacquiao's fights as I have also Mayweather's. Mayweather has had trouble defeating some fighters. Also those same fighters who then fought with the Filipino fighter afterwards. So I take away that conclusion. Remember in life, anyone can be fooled, so they could fool me. Anyone can be fooled. But I think Pacquiao is going to beat Mayweather."

RICKY HATTON

"Mayweather always finds a way to win. He's a very, very clever fighter, Manny, but you'd have to say the cleverest fighter in boxing is Mayweather. He adapts his style. I think he'll do the same to Manny. I can't for the life of me think Freddie Roach has told [Manny] to jump all over him, because everyone's tried that, me included, and everyone's failed. It's going to take someone of similar speed — which Pacquiao has got — and someone who's got fast feet, able to get in and out ... Manny shuffles in and out very well, but he needs to throw a lot of punches because Floyd's work rate is not massive. He chooses his moments, when to raise it, when to drop it. If Manny gets a high tempo but doesn't jump down the pipe [early on], uses his in-and-out fast hands, straight punches, he has the style to beat him. But if he tries to just sit on his chest and punch away, that plays into Floyd's hands."

BERNARD HOPKINS

"The first five or six rounds it's going to be a back-and-forth fight because of Pacquiao's aggression. But Pacquiao is not the best defensive fighter. Mayweather is going to sharp-shoot, and not only is Mayweather going to fight back when he needs to, but after that sixth round, it's done. I believe the second half of these 12 rounds is gonna be target practice for Floyd."

SUGAR RAY LEONARD

"I keep envisioning these early knockdowns because both guys will be so tight and wound-up and will just react upon head fakes. I wouldn't be surprised if there's an early knockout, maybe three, four or five rounds ... I give the edge to Mayweather. From a psychological perspective, he hasn't lost and has not tasted defeat. That's a plus. For Pacquiao, he's a beast himself. If he can become the Pacquiao of old, with all the punches that he used to throw, that's the only way he is going to beat Mayweather."

SHANE MOSLEY

"I almost knocked him [Mayweather] out straight out the gate [when they fought in 2010]. That would be a good tip for Pacquiao; he can't give Mayweather a chance to get comfortable or to pick up on his rhythm. If he is going to win, it's going to have to be in the first three or four rounds, tops. I would have to go with Mayweather, although I like Manny personally and wish him the best."

The Aussie who changed cycling forever

Adelaide's
Rohan Dennis reveals how he cycled further in an hour than anyone ever has...

You won the Tour Down Under in January, which is a pretty gruelling race in the heat. Was that the best prep for taking on the world one-hour record weeks later?

It's a funny thing with cycling that your first race of the year is always a bit harder than your second, third or fourth one. Your body is just not used to it but once you do get that race in, your body sort of opens up a bit more and you go to a level where training can't take you. This was the best time for me to go for it.

Would you have broken the record if you hadn't done the Tour Down Under?
I would still have broken the record but I don't think it would have been by as much. You can simulate the race a track background, that didn't take too long, getting that smoothness back and getting the pacing strategy right.

What was the pacing strategy? How did you approach it?

Initially we thought, "OK, let's break it down into four 15-minute efforts." Then we did a half-hour test run at training and that went real easy. So I thought, "I'll break it into half-hour blocks to begin with and then I'll do two 15-minute efforts to finish." That went really well, but at the same time, you have to get into a really repetitive mentality — go into the bend, out of the bend and hold form on the straights, into the next bend, pedal out, check your lap time and adjust accordingly to what your schedule is. Just do that mechanical problems. It was just a matter of how much by. At 15 minutes to go I was in front of schedule and then it was just a matter of by how much.

You didn't worry your body might suddenly pack it in test I was quite comfortable and that was the confidence boost to know I was going to break it on the day, for sure.

Fellow Aussie Jack Bobridge attempted it a couple of weeks before you and was a wreck by the end (and missed the record) — in contrast, you were lifting your bike over your head...

A lot of people ask, "How did you do that? You must have been fresh!" I was absolutely spent on the track, I couldn't do anything more, but when you finally get that 30 to 40-second breather and you realise you've done something pretty significant you do get that bit of energy and do things like lift your bike. People obviously didn't see the interview afterwards where I started cramping while sitting in a nice comfy chair...

Lots of people are attempting your record now, including Sir Bradley Wiggins — are you going to try to set another for the hour that can't be beaten?

It's definitely going to be broken in the next 12 months, if not the next four to six months. Alex Dowsett is doing it in May and he's a big threat — I'll be watching him closely. I'm not really planning on doing it anytime soon but I'll definitely have another go at some time in my career, whether that's five to 10 years... When I do, I will be trying to set a benchmark, like Brad Wiggins will be, that won't be broken for a long time.

DID A WEIGHTS SESH AFTER!

little bit with a scooter motor-pacing you, but I also got a confidence boost from Tour Down Under that I carried on to the world record attempt.

After winning the Tour, what was your prep like for the one-hour run?

For the first three or four days I stayed in Adelaide recovering. Then I flew over to Switzerland and was on the track every day leading up to it, but I didn't do a lot of kilometres or hours on the bike and it freshened me up a lot. It was mainly just getting technique back on the track. Given I've got a for 210 laps and you've got the record!

At what stage during the race did you know you'd get the record?

Pretty well as soon as I started I knew that I had it as long as there were no towards the end?

Before I did that half-hour test at training I did wonder that... I've never done more than 10km in one go on the track so I was a little bit cautious to say I would do it easily, but after the half-hour

COLLINGWOOD VS CARLTON

CHANNEL 7, FRIDAY, MAY 1, 7.30PM

Two of the AFL's fiercest rivals go head-to-head in this Friday night clash. What better way to blow off the steam from another shitty week at work than by watching two of the most-hated teams in Aussie Rules clash. Will Mick's boys get a much-needed win, or will his former golden boy Nathan Buckley drive the nail into his old coach's coffin? In a perfect world both teams would lose by 100.

THE GIST: A grumpy old man named Vincent (Bill Murray) is in debt and struggling to pay his sick wife's hospital bills. His only friend is a pregnant Russian hooker (a barely recognisable Naomi Watts). He ends up earning coin babysitting Oliver, the son of his new neighbour (Melissa McCarthy). The two form an unlikely friendship and teach each other important life lessons. ZOO SAYS: Murray is a legend and brings class to what would otherwise be an overly sentimental script.

FIRST LOOK!

STAR WARS BATTLEFRONT

These brand-new pics from the long-awaited Star Wars: Battlefront reboot are so realistic they could be a Jedi mind trick. Geeks and gun nuts will shake hands as the popular sci-fi flicks merge with Battlefield for epic space battles. Familiar planets from the film, like Endor and Hoth, are seen in a new trailer for the game, recreated in amazingly lifelike detail. It also teases X-wings, TIE fighters, AT-ATs and all the "Piew! Piew!" weapon sound effects that come with them. Mr Vader also shows up, indicating that Jedi will have a place in the game, too. Look out for it on November 19 for PS4, Xbox One and PC.

GUITAR HERO IS BACK!

Like a classic rock song with a modern remix, the plastic guitar-strumming title is back with an all-new take in Guitar Hero Live. Played from first-person perspective this time, the game captures real footage, including backstage dramas and interactions with your bandmates. The real crowd will boo and throw their junk at you if you stink it up, or happily bounce along if you shred the shit out of your show. That guitar accessory no longer has colour-coded buttons so it should feel less like strumming a baby toy. Look out for it later this year.

DEAD OR ALIVE GOES NUDE

It took game modders less than 24 hours to produce a nude patch for Dead or Alive 5: Last Round on PC, so we can all virtually catfight the way nature intended. The game developers pre-empted this response from fans and politely requested PC users play their game in "good moral and manner". But it hardly comes as a surprise and many more are on their way. Now boob-jiggle physics will be put to a real test.

ROCK

MUMFORD & SONS

WILDER MIND

SOUNDS LIKE: The band we all love to hate appear to have taken the criticism on board, as their third album sees the UK four-piece — made up of father Marcus Mumford and his very old-looking sons — ditching their trademark banjo and replacing it with electric guitars and a rockier sound.

Their long-time producer has also been replaced by James Ford of Arctic Monkeys fame.

ZOO SAYS: The band's pop skills remain, however they've lost their unique character now such a huge part of their identity has been stripped away. Bring back the banjo, we say!

INDIE ROCK

MY MORNING JACKET

THE WATERFALL

7/10

SOUNDS LIKE: The band you might be familiar with thanks to their appearance on a Family Guy episode just keep getting better with age. Four long years since their last album, the five-piece from Louisville, Kentucky return with gems like Spring (Among the Living), which features some inspired guitar work and dreamy vocals by fuzzy-haired frontman Jim James.

ZOO SAYS: The longer, more psychedelic tracks wash over you like the trippy waters on the cover, trumping shorter numbers like Big Decisions. There's a follow-up album already in the can, too.

PUNK

SELF-TITLED

8/10

SOUNDS LIKE: This four-piece from Oklahoma City, US, specialise in world-weary punk rock that centres around frontman Garrett Dale's gruff vocals and melodic guitar hooks. Tracks like Stranger — sadly not about sitting on your hand to numb it for a less-personal wank — are instantly memorable anthems for the everyday bloke.

ZOO SAYS: Three albums in and RCR are establishing themselves as one of the most consistent and promising bands in punk.

FOLK

WHO IS THE SENDER?

8/10

SOUNDS LIKE: The crusty old cult hero from the UK released his first album in 40 years in 2012, now he backs that critically acclaimed release up with more folk gold.

ZOO SAYS: These simple, heartfelt songs bring the feels and then some!

METALCORE

7/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Generic Aussie metalcore made more interesting with thought-provoking lyrics, earthy visuals and some proggy elements.

ZOO SAYS: A well-produced effort from the Byron boys. Fans of Parkway and Amity should dig.

EXORCISMS

Cases of possession are on the rise, warns the Vatican, as TV/film increases interest in the occult

1 Speakers at an exorcism conference in Rome, attended by 160 Catholic priests, blamed everything from porn to True Blood and Twilight for a boom in demonic possession — and demand for their services

2 One priest even said Pope Francis, who in a YouTube clip appears to cast out a demon, is part of the resurgence — last year the Pope spoke of the need for priests to “help those possessed by evil”

3 Professor Guiseppe Ferrari told attendees that groups attracted by “beautiful young vampires” in popular culture were trying to turn people into vampires or encourage them to have ritualistic sex so they can obtain special powers

4 Swiss-based exorcist Father Cesare Truqui spoke of a difference between mental illness and possession. He said classic signs include speaking in ancient tongues, levitating and unearthly strength

5 The number of exorcists worldwide has shot up over the past few years. Milan, Italy, installed an exorcist hotline in 2012, and a third of all calls received by churches in Rome are for exorcisms

6 US priest Father Thomas has said: “The worst people do is growl or make noise, although I had one client who repeated the first three lines of Hickory Dickory Dock over and over again — and that drove me crazy”

+ The Pentagon is constructed so that no point in the building is more than a 10-minute walk away from another point

+ In Venezuela, petrol costs around six cents a gallon, making it the cheapest car fuel in the world

+ The Beach Boys' Brian Wilson (right) was afraid of the water, despite writing heaps of songs about surfing

+ Actor Martin Sheen has been arrested 66 times, mostly because he's an active political/environmental protester

+ A report has found lesbians earn a third more than straight women, but gay blokes' wages are 20 per cent less than their hetero counterparts'

+ One whale carcass can support other life forms in the ecosystem for 50 to 75 years

ZOO confessions!

The girls of ZOO Singles leave their inhibitions at the computer screen and reveal all about their raunchy online dating experiences...

CARLY, 26

"I broke up with my long-term fella and realised I wanted something different: just fun... just sex! After signing up to ZOO Singles I had access to hundreds of guys minutes from where I live. At first I was quite shy, but after a few days I'd had amazing sex! With a new guy to please whenever I feel like it, I've never felt so satisfied!"

DESIREE, 43

"I find men my age cannot keep up with my highly active sex drive, so I prefer the effort put in by a horny 20-something. One guy wanted me so badly he would contact me in the middle of the night to meet up! It turned me on so much knowing how badly he wanted sex. I guess there's a certain appeal to a woman with experience in the bedroom."

TARA, 21

"I work nights in a hotel and my sex life suffers, so I signed up to ZOO Singles. I wanted one guy right away so I suggested he pay me a visit at work. I checked him into a room and after a few minutes I got a very sexy room service request. With customer service a priority, I put a 'Do Not Disturb' sign on the door, and then he began to rip off my clothes!"
